Level Up: Demographics and Policies

What policies does your library have for different demographics (such as children, teens, adults, seniors, or users with a specific type of disability) that indicate what technology is appropriate for those groups? For example, can children check out DVDs? Can teens use the computers?

What reasons might the library have for these policies? This might include state or federal law, language skill, library security, and consideration of the needs of all users.

Ask three other AmeriCorps members: what policies does your library have? What are the reasons for those policies? Do you feel the policy is effective? Why or why not?
