The Infant Brain

- recognizes the visual pattern that makes up the human face
- differentiates a realistic image of a face from an abstract or cartoon image
- differentiates their mother's face from other faces
- make sense of the world through visual images

World Water Crisis

- Water resources are under increasing pressure.
- Midwest crops suffered from the worst drought in 60 years in 2012.
- Places like El Paso and San Antonio could run out of water in 10-20 years.

Who knows the
"PowerPoint rules"

7X7 Rule for PowerPoint

- The 7X7 rule is easy to remember
- Use seven bullets per slide
- In addition to the slide title
- Use seven or fewer words per bullet
- 32-point font is a readable size
- Uses most of available space
- Did you get all that?

No more than six words.

EVER.

(Seth Godin)

Avoid cognitive overload

The Slideument

Cognitive overload is epitomized by the Slideument—a slide that is trying to be a document, that is, trying to capture too much information on a slide because there are just so many details you want the audience to know.

A slideument taxes the cognitive limitations of the human brain, not to mention the capacity of human vision to read 24-point text from 20 feet or more and to make all the necessary mental calculations and associations before moving on to the next slide.

Reduce and simplify

The Made To Stick Principles

- Simple — find the core of any idea
- Unexpected — grab people's attention by surprising them
- Concrete — make sure an idea can be grasped and remembered later
- Credibility — give an idea believability
- Emotion — help people see the importance of an idea
- Stories — empower people to use an idea through narrative
